

Centre for Teaching and Learning Charter

CTL is a key contributor to Southern Cross University's purpose: Changing lives through revolutionary learning and research with real impact.

Our mission is to contribute to transformative and institutional change by partnering with all staff to advance teaching and learning within the Southern Cross Model, aligning with the strategic priorities of education and student experience, outstanding people, digital transformation, and reimaged campuses.

The CTL will achieve this by:

➤ University partnerships

Collaborating with key areas of the University and students to provide guidance to achieve the University's teaching and learning and technology strategic priorities..

➤ Professional Learning

Providing an inspiring range of teaching and learning professional learning opportunities for all staff, in a timely manner, to build capacity and drive continual improvement with an engaged workforce.

➤ Being Bold, Innovative and Ambitious

Promoting a dynamic Centre culture of scholarly, evidence-based and reflective practice, and continuously striving for excellence in all we do to improve student learning.

➤ Distributed Leadership and Engagement

Practising distributed leadership across the University through strong and caring relationships built on trust, respect, truth and commitment while participating in relevant avenues to promote the scholarship of teaching and learning.

➤ Promoting effective and engaging curriculum, teaching and learning

Embedding the principles of the Southern Cross Model with supporting educational technologies, digital learning environments and future pedagogies to optimise student learning outcomes.

➤ Sector Connections

Engaging with the higher education sector, external professional bodies and communities to actively collaborate and partner in scholarship and quality practices and outcomes.
